Breaking News! Crisis in the Junior Security Council

In the Junior Security Council, it was discussed Iran's nuclear program and development.

Today, occurred an explosion at the Natanz facility in Iran, and the nation blamed the United Kingdom and France for the explosion. These two powers have publicly admitted that they have worked with Iran in their development of a nuclear power plant as part of a secret agreement. These nations are facing international condemnation, with Turkey trying to set peace.

Moreover, intelligence agencies claim to have intercepted encrypted communication between operatives that include references to covert logistical plans and coordination meetings, with code names linked to known UK and France intelligence units. Additionally, satellite and drone imagery reportedly captured unmarked vehicles near the Natanz facility, with identifiers traceable to the British and France military.

It was asked to the delegates of France and the United Kingdom if they would take responsibility for the disaster that had occurred, and if they were aware of the consequences that these would bring to Iran and their nearby countries. The delegation of the United Kingdom answered "No, we don't take 100% responsibility because this was also the fault of France…..but it was an action that must be taken."

Several countries show preoccupation for Iran's civilians, and the millions injured through the disaster. Trying to promote as much help as possible.
